Clues and Interrogations

In order to solve the crime, you must find clues and interrogate guests. Clues can be found all over the game world so keep an eye out for any objects that appear out of place, they may be relevant. But don't be fooled however, not all clues you find will point towards the murderer. Another way in which you can gather evidence is by questioning the guests. The questioning styles available you you are dependent on the personality traits you selected at the start of the game. Remember, not all guests will take kindly to certain styles of question.

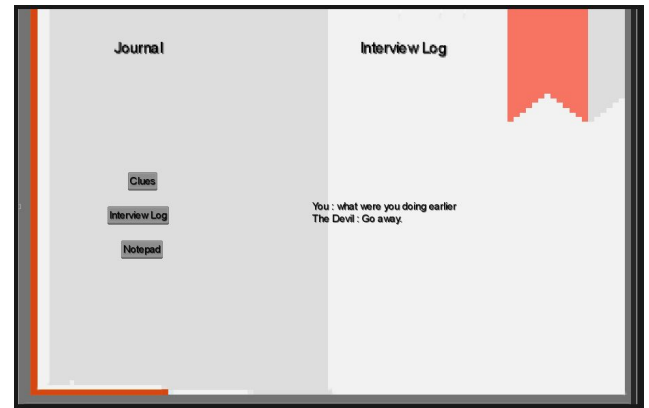

Journal

Every detective's best friend, your journal is your means of keeping track of your progress during the story. It can be accessed by clicking the button at the top of the game screen. There are three main sections within your journal, Clues, Interview Log and Notepad. The clues menu automatically updates with clues you find in the game world. The Interview Log will keep track of the guests you have interrogated and what they have said. The Notepad is a place for you to write your own notes about the clues and suspects.

Accusations

Once you have gathered enough evidence from clues and interrogations, you can accuse who you think is the murderer. You can only make a successful accusation if you have correctly identified the guilty party and have enough evidence to support your claim. If this is the case, you win! However, if your accusation is unsupported or you are accusing the wrong person, you will not be able to question this person again, potentially preventing you from finding out crucial information, so be careful!
